

Abstract

Thesis title: Enforcement of rights in industrial property

This thesis deals with issues of enforcement of rights in industrial property and its aim is, first, to provide a full picture of means to enforce intellectual property rights (with particular emphasis on current legislation) and, second, to analyze the Law No. 221/2006 Coll., on the enforcement of industrial property rights in more detail with jurisprudence and scientific literature.

The first method of this thesis, which was chosen, is a scientific description which allows mapping single areas of enforcement of rights in industrial property. The second method, which was chosen, is an analytical method which allows examining the Law on the enforcement of industrial property rights.

This thesis is structured into five single chapters, which are themselves broken down into subchapters, sections and subsections. First chapter examines issues of intellectual property rights in general terms and interprets the principal definitions regarding these rights. Second chapter is dedicated to a full picture of legislation at the international and national level and at the level of the EU. Third chapter deals with the different areas of public enforcement of industrial property rights. Fourth chapter deals with the different areas of private enforcement of these rights. Last chapter is dedicated to the specific field of private enforcement of industrial property rights, in particular regarding the analysis of Law on the enforcement of industrial property rights.
