

The work is focused on observing of child behaving when she or he has to choose from a few possibilities offer and when the child is not given a notice about more options, when it depends on the child himself if it would take notice and utilize other variations.

Based on four activities (which were compiled in the way that they could refer about the fact if the child would even take in account other suggestions) the response of twelve children was observed. Their reactions have been analyzed from different points of view as well as the children's experiences up to now.