

ABSTRACT

The Master's work deals with the adaptation process of elders, taking social work services with accommodation. Theoretically introduces the topic of social services, demography and actual documents. Following investigation shows that residential services are not preferred by seniors; its use is connected with negative feelings, at least at the beginning. The key role plays a family and social relationships that can widely help to bear the situation. In particular, we recommend the change of conception of social services, introduce unified system of data processing and support of social service.
