

Mladá Boleslav is a town with long and rich cultural tradition, which has been linked with lots of literary active personalities. The name Mikuláš Klaudián and his famous Brethern's print shop are connected with Brethern Unity. The writer Alois Vojtěch Šmilovský, born in Mladá Boleslav, reminded his birthplace especially in his short stories. The writer Ferdinand Schulz stayed for two years in Mladá Boleslav as a student and described them in his book called Latinská babička. At the beginning of 20th century writer Karel Sellner came to Mladá Boleslav and his further educational activities of a school inspektor, homeland scientist and writer enriched the life of Mladá Boleslav community. Writer Adolf Branald was known famous for his automobile love for town, and he devoted his book Dědeček automobil to the start of motor sport and car industry.