

My thesis is called: The Influence of Interest Groups on the U.S. Governmental Decision-Making. In the first part, I deal with the conception of interest groups and lobbying. I tried to find the best corresponding definition of both conceptions. Then I have specified the typology of lobbying and I have also described the process of how the lobbyist is working. I have drawn out the relationship between lobbying and corruption.

The second part is dedicated solely to the USA. Historical progress of American interest groups is quite long, and there were several laws regarding lobbying. Legal regulations of lobbying in the United States are also mentioned in my thesis. The second part is ended by a historical state of lobbying in the United States.

The last part is more concrete. I have described the impact of pro-Israel lobby on American foreign policy. There is also mentioned the organization AIPAC. This organization is one of the most influential and best organized interest groups in the United States.
