

Annotation

The hereby presented bachelor thesis „Shared custody and its influence on family“ deals with the issue of shared custody and describes its setting in the Czech legal system. It deals with its theoretical framework and its comparison with practice. It focuses on the specific problems encountered by parents in connection with after-divorce child care, namely problems with courts or communication with a former partner. Methods of data collection used in this work are desk research and analysis of data gotten from semi-structured interviews. The aim is to analyze the configuration of this policy and to define the main problems related to its implementation. Further, this bachelor thesis presents the perception of shared custody through parents' view and focuses on its influence on families. Theories and concepts used in this work are the best interest of the child, psychological deprivation and implementation theory.