Abstract:

The bachelor thesis focuses on the problem of premature labour and the nursing care of the woman at risk of premature labour. The thesis consists of a theoretical and clinical part. In the introduction of this work, the progress of pregnancy, causes, risks, diagnosis and the therapy of premature labour and the characteristics of premature newborns are described. The last chapter of the theoretical part is focused on the psychology of pregnant woman with imminent premature labour. The clinical part is done in the form of case reports and the method of the nursing process according to Marjory Gordon for its processing is used. The study also deals with the emergence of the nursing process, its history and determining nursing diagnoses. The characteristics of the nursing model of health and domains used in this study is also described. In the casuistry, the history of the pregnant woman, the course of hospitalization and the assessment of current and potential nursing diagnoses are mentioned. In the conclusion of the thesis, the process of the delivery and the status of the newborn are described.

Keywords:

nursing care, premature labour, pregnancy, premature newborn