

Abstract

The thesis is trying to understand matters of assistance to victims of crime in the Czech Republic primarily through law 45/2013 Sb., about victims of crime. Author is trying to find a link between using of rights and institutes from the law and victimological concepts of typology of victims of crime and victimization. At the same time author is examining practical working of these rights and institutes. In theoretical part is also used concept of life course perspective, mainly for examining a return of the victims to ordinary life. The research is based on qualitative study with interviewing experts and study of relevant documents. So the view is mediated by workers in organizations for victims of crime. Author did not find a link between type of victims and use ratio of rights and institutes. In practice the Czech police is not working very well with information duty and citizens do not know much about their rights. Author is giving some recommendations for improving system of assistance to victims of crime to be more effective.