Abstract

We will introduce quotients, which are very special kinds of continuous maps. We are going to study their nice universal properties and use them to formalize the notion of topological gluing. This concept will allow us to define interesting topological structures and analyze them. Finally, the developed theory will be used for writing down a precise proof of the existence of an inscribed rectangle in any Jordan curve.