

Abstract

This bachelor thesis is focused on systematics and distribution of freshwater red algae. There is a reference to the relationship between taxa and taxonomic groups and, possibly, their current and past classification.

The thesis is based on the findings of published scientific papers. On the basis of this information, I have compiled an approximate current system of freshwater red algae with information about their distribution.