

Abstract (in English):

Archeological exclavations on plots no. 72.74 in Nymburk present basis for wider study of functional disposition of urban plot and town as a whole. Then, there is a question of material culture of high medieval and early modern household in Nymburk. Shifts and changes in disposition and constructions on the urban plot and waste and water management. Written sources are considered as well as analogies from already researched contexts. History, appearance and development of town of Nymburk is studied and described and earlier field and academic research is summarized.

Keywords (anglicky):

archeology; town; urban plot; material culture; Middle Ages; Early Modern Period, 1250-1650