

Abstract

Title: Legal and economic aspects of management of non-profit sports organizations in the Czech Republic compared to other country

Objectives: The aim of the thesis is to compare the important legal and economic aspects of management of non-profit sport organizations in the Czech Republic and Slovakia. The subsidiary objective is to describe the current state of functioning of selected non-profit sports organizations in the Czech Republic and the Slovak Republic

Methods: In order to achieve the objectives the method of document analysis and the comparison method is used in this thesis. The method of document analysis is applied to describe the current form of legal and economic aspects of management of non-profit sports organizations in the Czech Republic and Slovakia. The comparative method is used through selected comparative criterias to draw a comparison between the situation of non-profit sports organizations in both countries.

Results: In the final part of the thesis the similarities and differences between non-profit sport organizations of the type of association in the Czech Republic and type of civic association in the Slovak Republik are described from the point of view of legal and economic aspects of management. The results of the final thesis consist of defining the strengths of the functioning of non-profit sport organizations in the Czech Republic and the Slovak Republic, as well as recommendations for introducing changes in these two countries.

Keywords: non-profit sector, non-profit sport organization, civil association, an association, comparison