

The main topic of this thesis is the application of stochastic dominance constraints to portfolio optimization problems. First, we recall Markowitz model. Then we present portfolio selection problems with stochastic dominance constraints. Finally, we compare performance of these two approaches in an empirical study presented in the last chapter.