

Abstract

Title: The case study of physiotherapy treatment of a patient with the diagnosis of ankylosing spondylitis with rhizomelic disability and after left hip joint replacement surgery

Author: Adéla Cvachová

Summary: The bachelor thesis is focused on the issue of rehabilitation after rheumatic surgery of the left hip joint, indicated from rheumatic ankylosing spondylitis disease with rhizomelic disability. It consists of two parts – theoretical and practical. In the theoretical part, the thesis deals with the etiology of genesis, diagnosis clinical presentation, treatment options for ankylosing spondylitis and problematice of rheumatosurgery of the hip joint. The practical part is focused on physiotherapeutic treatment of the patient after total hip replacement with ankylosing spondylitis taken into account. The case study was based on four weeks praxis in the Rheumatology Institute in Prague in January 2019.

Key words: case study, ankylosing spondylitis, rheumatic disease, rheumatosurgery, hip joint replacement, physiotherapy

Name of diagnosis: M45 Ankylosing spondylitis