

In my bachelor thesis I have designed and programmed an open source application that implements basic functions of a business-to-consumer e-shop. The system is modular and easily extensible with simple module administration. In the customer section it is possible to browse the product catalogue, view the price of products, their quantity in stock etc. The application maintenance is situated in the employees' section, as is the maintenance of employee and customer accounts, permissions, goods and their categories.