

Annotation

This bachelor's thesis is discussing the role of fear in invasive treatment. This work is intended in particular for nurses. The goal of this bachelor's thesis is to evaluate sensation of fear in patients with the diagnosis of carpal or cubital tunnel syndrome, in relation to an invasive treatment (operation). In the theoretical part were described and defined terms fear, anxiety, phobia, pain, maturity and age, resumed facts about carpal and cubital tunnel syndromes, their symptoms, diagnostics, treatment, and care of the patients after the operative treatment.