

A comparison between three different approaches to developing an AI agent for the board game Azul and their implementation, testing and consequent results of said tests. A part of the thesis is also a simulator created in a game engine for playing against a local player or an artificial intelligence agent.