The Thesis analyses the more or less current situation of missionary activities of the Church in the Czech Republic. The situation is analysed via a short excursus to the Czech history with respect to the missionary activities ad gentes, summary of organisations and societies acting in this field, and by a research. The research was made in the form a questionnaire survey. The research objective was to find out up to what degree the Catholic population is aware of the missionary role of the Church and willing and able to take part in the missionary activities.
