

Annotation

This thesis deals with orthographical variability of Japanese auxiliary nouns. In the theoretical part, there is a definition of used terms and methods related to the following analytical section, where various ways of writing Japanese auxiliary nouns in BCCWJ corpus subcorpora are compared. After analysis identifies subcorpora of interest, sentences containing auxiliary nouns in said subcorpora are checked for similarities in meaning.

Keywords

Japanese language, auxiliary nouns, orthography, way of writing, variability