

This bachelor's work is called Children and their leisure time in Jižní Město. It is dealing with the topic of spending leisure time of children and young adults in the city district Prague 11 - Jižní Město. The work is divided into two main parts – theoretical and practical. The theoretical part is defining the basic terms important for this work - endangered children and young adults, free time, unorganized children and young adults etc. The practical part is focusing on the secondary analysis of a questionnaire research. The questionnaire research has been organised by drop-in centres for children and young adults Ymkárium, Jižní Pól and Dixie in co-operation with the city district Prague 11. The research was completed in nine basic schools in Jižní Město by lower-secondary pupils (age group 11 to 15). The respondents were answering the questions concerning their leisure time; trust in adults, parents concern and the rate of socially undesirable phenomenon. The main aim of this bachelor's work is to compare the organized and unorganized children and young adults in the city district Prague 11 - the ways and places they spend their leisure time, the measure of influence of socially undesirable phenomenon. The sub aims are focusing on following questions: Is the presence of social and leisure time services for children like drop-in centres for children and young adults reasoned and needed? Is it possible to specify characteristics (factors), which the most endangered group of children has in common? Inspection real opportunities of children and young adults to spend their leisure time effectively in the city district Prague 11.
