

This master's thesis both evaluates and gives reasons for the significance of the civic sector for the development of critical thinking in the Czech society as well as the contribution of critical thinking to civil society. At the same time it focuses on analysing the philosophical roots of the critical thinking movement, and it also maps the current situation in the Czech society with respect to the activities promoting the development of critical society in the society.