

Abstract:

This thesis focuses on project of Věra Machoninová – the urban complex of Budějovická square in Prague dated to 1969. Special interest is given to urbanism conception of the project. As a follow-up to state-of-the-art Metro station Budějovická there was planned important urban center including public objects same as administrative buildings. Important aspect of this thesis is assessment of final realization from years 1972-1981; current status and how the place and urbanism was affected by new constructions made nearby in later years.

Key words:

Architecture, Urbanism, 20th century, Czech architecture, Brutalism, Prague, Department stores, Věra Machoninová, DBK, Budějovická, Prague metro