

Name and surname: Vladimír Čížek

Dissertation's term: Comparison children's motor abilities at children's home with children of common population at the age of fourteen, fifteen

Place of work: Department of rudiments of kinantropology and humanities

Dissertation's head: Doc. PhDr. Jitka Chytráčková, CSc.

Viva – voice's year of disertation: 2008

Abstract – terms:

Work's aim: To compare children's motor abilities at children's home with children of common population at the age of fourteen, fifteen and to adumbrate trouble with going in for sports and motor abilities's level this youth in these facilities.

Used methods: by means of testing battery, containing four motor disciplines which is used in common schools, sportsclub and which is used for common population's testing. Values for each test batterie's item were gained by testing and measuring monitoring fail organization's performances. Certain points which are in accordance with performance and which make provision child's age were assigned to for each test batterie's item. File organizations' results of all tests concerning particular childrens were statistically significant were arranged and results were examined.

Results: We found that children at children's home hat lower motoring ability in comparision to common population. The most important test of testing battery is 12 minutes lasting race ang specific race which must be run for 4 times 10 metres. These races were very unsuccessful for children

We found that children at children's home hat lower motoring ability in comparision to common population. The most important test of testing battery is 12 minutes lasting race ang specific race which must be run for 4 times 10 metres. These races were very unsuccessful for children

The most important words: motor ability, testing battery, children's home, file organization's result