

Abstract:

This thesis deals with the foreign policy of Barack Obama's in his first term 2009 – 2012. The aim is to evaluate the U. S. foreign policy towards BRIC(S) in this term. The acronym BRIC(S) partnership brings together world powers Russia and China and regional powers Brazil, India and South Africa. The introduction is dedicated to the characteristics of the main actors, the USA, President Obama and BRIC(S). The next section presents the assumptions of the U. S. foreign policy, its factors and its limits. Finally, it analyzes the foreign policy of Barack Obama. The analyses showed the different approach in its foreign policy toward superpowers China and Russia on one hand and regional powers Brazil, India and South Africa on the other.