

The aim of the thesis is to create a program for Linux that generates screenshots of webpages independently on the windowing system. The GtkMozEmbed component of the Mozilla browser is used. A part of the thesis is a modification of the GTK+ library so that the graphic output is directed to a chosen file independently of the windowing system.