

Annotation

The dissertation deals with problems of patients' satisfaction with the cure of the chronic pain.

The theoretical part is centered on the present knowledge of the chronic untumoral pain. The present knowledge of the chronic untumoral pain is summarized there, especially the chronic pain and the pain as a syndrome are defined. The knowledge of factors, which influence the perception of the chronic pain are summarized there, their reasons and the psychosomatics of the chronic pain. The multidisciplinary approach is needed and it is important to change patient's lifestyle as a part of a successful cure of the chronic pain.

The empirical part enlarges research investigation in a form of questionnaires and a leadership of standardized interview with asked patients, which are cured in the ambulance for the cure of the chronic pain in a hospital in Jablonec nad Nisou. This research is centered on discovering positive and negative experience for the time of the cure of the chronic pain, to survey the satisfaction with the results of the present cure of the chronic pain, to determine parts of life, in which the chronic pain mostly hit the patients and parts, which this treatment helped them to get better.