

Abstract

Diploma thesis "People with mental handicap on the employment market in the Czech Republic" deals with employment services offered to people with disabilities - especially with mental disabilities - in Czech Republic. Low employment of the people with mental handicap is discussed as all-society problem deepening the social exclusion of these people in addition to burdening national budget. Diploma thesis analyzes employment services which state provides and compares it with non-governmental organizations' services. It targets strengths of both types of these services and possibilities of connection and aims at solutions of low employment problem of people with mental disabilities. Interviews with stakeholders participating at solutions of this problem are also parts of diploma thesis.
