The goal of this work is to analyze possible ways of network protocol into application protocol encapsulation - as used for example to create network tunnel or bypass rewall rules. Methods to detect such encapsulation on network rewalls aimed to prevent such application protocol tunnels are proposed. The work includes reference implementation of one proposed method.