

The thesis is focused on South-eastern Europe and environmental history. The aim is to examine the state of environmental history in this area and to determine what are the main topics of the researches done there. In the introduction will be given definitions to used terms, on basis of them were selected the works analysed further. Next is historical and historiographical context and categorization of works by their topic. Separately, there will be described the Albanian case, which will go deeper into history, historiography and also parts of politics and society. In the end, the thesis will sum up the information and will determine possibilities of further researches.