

This bachelor's thesis deals with biblical phraseological units in the context of Czech and Russian nation's awareness about them.

By means of empirical probe it strives to examine the extent to which these units are in use nowadays, whether they are actual and comprehensible, in what sort of situations they are being used and if native speakers are familiar with their origin.