

The new form of inclusive education underlines the importance of the social contact and communication between the students. We presume the existence of the barriers that hinder the natural friendship building in the schools. We identify those barriers through the perspective of the students. The objective of the research is to detect different possible ways of perceiving the student with special needs by his classmates in the secondary mainstream schools. The main topic is the perception of the differences.