

There are many different applications which help with project management nowadays. Project management applications differ considerably in their options, capabilities and most of all in their area of focus. Applications focused on coordinating work of group of people are among them. There are also many webpages that give their users the means to offer or request workforce. It is surprising that nobody has thought about bringing those two ideas together. It offers significant flexibility, especially in the area of software development. Workgroups can be easily created and disbanded as needed.

The goal of this project is to create a simple web application which will provide dynamic environment for easy collaboration of many users on many projects. Part of the project will be a very simple project management software focused on manpower administration as well as a place to publish workforce supply and demand advertisements.
