

In my bachelor work I'm engaged in questions regarding the probation service and especially in subject of parole. In the work there are discussed particular parts of the service, however the main emphasis is placed on parole. The important part is also about historical roots, thanks to which we were able to reach the today's levels. And of course the need to move forward, educate and improve current systems. For the practical part of my work I have put together casuistries, which I met during my practice in Prague probation centre. For each casuistry I'm trying to show its specificity and I'm thinking over how they were figured out by the court and how the results have influenced the client's future life. In my work I'm lining out the part of the social worker in this sector and his role to improve the whole system. It is important to point out the connection with law, that means that working for probation service is asking high professional demands. It is necessary to be well acquainted with the legal system and be professional in communication with the client. However the most important role is to make the client's life easier in their hard times and help them to better and upstanding life.
