

This thesis is focused on the final moments of World War II, and on the very beginning of the revolution against Nazi occupiers in May 1945 in the Nové Strašecí region, which is situated in the western part of Central Bohemia. We briefly went through the industry in the region and its history up to the war. Some chapters are concentrated on the affairs that were important for the next matters, i.e. setting up a summer house for presidents in Lány village or activities of the Communist Party.
