

The frequency of termination of pregnancy by Caesarean section continued to grow since the 70s

the last century, in the Euro-Atlantic area is 10-30%. In the Czech Republic to follow a similar trend. In 2007, was terminated in this manner approximately 20% of births, it represents 8% growth rate over the past 10 years (Velebil et al., 2008).

In the eyes of the public has a reputation for caesarean seemingly simple and safe performance. There are women who prefer it and ask for their obstetrician termination of pregnancy in this way.

The aim of this work is a comprehensive report caesarean section, with emphasis on its complications that may endanger the mother, but also the newborn.