

This dissertation thesis deals with basic etruscan space division and orientation of cult buildings. It describes architecture of etruscan temples, pillar construction and construction materials differing from greek temples. It also deals with altars. It summarizes different approaches to etruscan temples and opinions on their evolution. At the end there are attached examples of individual temples located in Etruria.