

The degree thesis titled "Universities and educational policy in the Czech republic after the year 1989" aims at university education after 1989. And more than this, I seek to perceive aspects with possible impacts on further development of university education. Twenty years of evolving university education have witnessed enormous influence on the condition of universities in the Czech Republic. When mapping the status several aspects have to be taken into consideration. To perceive the past is as important as to foresee the potential future. And this is what I attempted to describe in the final part of my degree thesis.
