

Diploma thesis „the ethical plausibility of suicide“ deals with problem of suicide from philosophical and ethical spectacle. Enthroned essential methodological determination in view on different suicides. Important determination is essential enthronement of hierarchy of human questioning for life. In the thesis is showed primary ontological question, secondary qualitative question and tertiary quantitative question. This determination of essential questions should help in inquiry for main thesis question: „in which cases is suicide ethically acceptable or ethically good.“ Diploma thesis works with different arguments and admittances to suicide. Diploma thesis confrontates this arguments and admittances with offered methodology and with ethical norms and systems from other philosophers. Those norms and systems are converted to essential three questions and consequently compared, if they can predicate something about ethical acceptability suicide. Diploma thesis don't only stays on person of self-murderer. Diploma thesis tries to show a connections between the act of suicide and relations with other people. The moment which draws together different cogitations is moment of toleration. Final admittance is build on teaching of John Locke. Diploma thesis is also forced to consider the problem of human freedom.