

This bachelor thesis is dealing with the analysis and description of the most distinctive factors influencing operating of circular labour migrants from Ukraine on the Prague's labour market, from the student's point of view. Analysis of this phenomenon insists on theoretical basis of the migration studies from the sociological and anthropological perspective, which is focused on both structural and personal anticipation of migrants abroad (focused on the Czech Republic), dealing with the specific conditions influencing their participating on legal, illegal and quasi*legal economic activities and based on the partial results of the qualitative research done at the beginning of 2009 in Prague.