Dissertation : Inter-professional Collaborations to Support Children with SEN in Preschool

Student : Anahit Stepanyan

Research Supervisor : Doc. Dr. R. Wildová, CSc.

The topic of this dissertation is very actual in term of inclusive education. Anahit has chosen this topic to become more familiar with the reality of inter-professional collaboration on the field of preschool education generally as well as in the Czech Republic.

The research topic is clearly formulated, not very large, but from the point of master degree dissertation, we can consider it as appropriate.

The structure of the study is well done, each chapter has its own topic, methodology and conclusion.

I consider the chapter 2 – Review of Literature- as very valuable part of this study. Anahit has presented a very good orientation at the research literature. She presented the ability to work with different resources, to evaluate them and use the theoretical findings for the problem solving approach.

The research orientated to the inter-professional collaboration at chosen preschool institution has been well prepared and the chosen methodology is good.

The research question and subquestions are clear and Anahit was able to use them to recognize what she was looking for.

The only problem is, the sample of preschool institutions was very limited and than, we have to be very carefull to use data findings.

Talking about recommendations, we have to take into account, that only few professionalists were responding. Also we have to take into account the personal differences among respondents.

We can evaluate this dissertation as valuable model how the search the ways benefits, limits) of inter-professional cooperation (also another ones), but again, we have to be very carefull in working with research findings.

Anihat did a good work from the research and formal point of view. The only formal problem is repeating sentences on page 8 and 33,34.

I dont have any negative comments on this dissertation. Anahit have to react on the comments about the limits of this research during a viva. She can also talk more concretely about her reccomendations.
