

Key words

preschool age, social environment, family, personally-social development of children, experimentation and manipulation with objects, object of spontaneous interest, nature pedagogy, forest schools, investigation of animated and insentient nature

Annotation

In current time there exist a lot of publications on book market, which describes, what is possible to do with children, how to play the games with them, how to influence on them. The main interest now is stimulation, but we must not forget the personal-subjective and spontaneous interest of child. Also child has "right for relaxation, free time, games and relaxing activities, which matches its age" (Children Rights Convention from year 1991, sect. 31).

A graduation theses consists in direct and noncommitted observation of preschool children in exterior, in the nature. The essential goal of the observation is to discover, if and what children notice in the nature, what do they choose and what they do with choosen object.