

The topic of following dissertation is a right-wing political extremism as a specific phenomenon. The work is focused primarily on the personality of ultraright-wing radicals and extremists. This dissertation examines a process of political socialization of ultra-right-wing extremists, his values and attitudes, his selfreflection and deals with a theory of authoritarianism as a personality trait.

A phenomenon of extremism is studied through four science disciplines - psychology, sociology, politology and political philosophy. Work based on research questionnaire made with high school students and with extremists and on qualitative research made with representatives of ultra-righ- wing scene.