

The graduation theses is oriented on the problems of nutrition disorders in the intensive care unit. In the theoretical part are contained a basic informations about nutrition disorders. In the practical part is covered the nursing case report of the patient suffering from anorexia nervosa and with the help qualitative research were charted indices to related hospitalization the patients with nutrition disorders in the unit intensive specializations.