

In the dissertation thesis „The problem of social deviations in the undergraduate preparation of teachers" we theoretically result from the actual social changes, which often reflect on the school environment. Social deviance behaviour isn't a new phenomenon in the society. Of course in the school environment it is the phenomenon which is very undesirable - harmful. The dissertation thesis reflect with its theoretical data a few fields. The first one, which we are interested in, is the determination of social deviations. Consequently we are interested in the actual changes in the school environment mainly with focusing on changes, which influence the teachers who just touch it - the concept changes.
