

This thesis originated from the need of a deeper understanding of the recent changes that have been taking place in the city of Liberec. Aside from the necessary base in the form of the city's historical background it reflects some of the modern urbanistic theories and essays on contemporary architecture. By this means it then tries to explain the constructional boom of past years, point out its biggest negatives and dangers and eventually also to outline some particular solutions.