The goal of this thesis is to design and implement an interactive user input device for a PC, consisting of a web-camera scanning the gestures of the user's hand. The user will be wearing a special glove fixed with colored LED diodes to aid the image analysis process. Thesis concentrates on possible approaches to real-time image processing and interactive recognition of gestures. The ultimate goal is to substitute the basic functionality of the "computer mouse".