

The bachelor thesis is focused on the discipline of information architecture. The concept of information architecture is conceived as an organization of digital information in a World Wide Web network. The first part of work deals with theoretical aspects of the field. In the first chapter is presented the history of the information architecture's concept, its definition and the definition in the context of related disciplines. The following chapters describe the components of information architecture and principles that are used in its creation. Next