

The bachelor thesis focuses at the beginning and evolution of the Dějiny a současnost journal (The History and the Present) from the late 50s of the 20th century till the prohibition of publishing the journal in 1969. The media, historical, political, and legal context is accentuated. The work also describes features, contents, and the changes of media at the end of the 60s generally. It shows the change of the original intention of the publisher in 1963, when the journal opposed the regime. In 1965, after an encroachment of the Communist Party, the ambitions of the journal temporarily stopped, however, during the Prague's Spring, the journal became progressive again and promoted the ideas of reformed communism.