

The thesis deals with Internet communication and communities on the Internet. At the beginning summarizes existing knowledge in the field of communication, the theory and division. This is followed by the performance of certain Internet communications. Then describes the aspects of Internet communication, which brings you Cyberspace. After discussing the issue of communication focuses on issues of communities. More details will then deal with site Facebook.com. Following the presentation of basic functions of this site presents accomplishments and negatives of this phenomenon of the last days.