

Bachelor thesis Margaret Thatcher's foreign policy. Her attitude to communism and to the Soviet Union in the eighties shows on single examples development of Margaret Thatcher's attitude to communism when she was the prime minister of Great Britain. Her critical opinions to communism were clear in the period when she wasn't in high policy, at the beginning this thesis considers how she got on the post of the prime minister. Most attention is given to the period when she was the prime minister. Thesis tries according to her's reactions to the single examples, which influenced relations between East and West in the eighties, shows development of her attitudes to communism. Next question is if her anticommunism was influenced by her quite good relationship with the leader of Soviet union Michail Gorbachev. Intention of this thesis is look into conception of foreign policy of Margaret Thatcher towards Soviet Union. What influenced her's decisions and by what she guided in her's foreign policy towards Soviet union.